32) The syllabic writing of the month addaru — The document published here is a simple promissory note.¹ Ardiya son of Aḫušunu is responsible for the silver put at the disposal of Šumaya son of Aplaya. Unfortunately, no other information about the concerned parties is known and the witnesses are otherwise unattested in published Nippur texts. However, the scribe Iddin-Enlil, son of Aplaya, is possibly mentioned in BE VIII/1, 89 : 15 and in BE VIII/1, 101 : 13 since in the first document, dated to the 4th (?) year of Cambyses, the name of his father is not preserved and in the second, dated to the 1st year of Barziya, his name occurs without a patronymic.

Cohen has observed that the month-names of the Standard Mesopotamian Calendar were never written syllabically but only ideographically.² This observation needs to be qualified since the present text contains the first attested syllabic spelling of a month name. It is possible that the syllabic writing of a month name by the scribe Iddin-Enlil belongs to a specific Nippur scribal tradition and is related to the atypical writing of ancestor names.³

BM 103558 (1911-04-08, 248)⁴
3.5 x 3.1 cm

Obv.  1) [x x] KÛ.BABBAR ina KÛ.BABBAR-
2) ⌈I⌉ GI[tú] šá la-IGI “MU-a
3) A “Ap-la-a na-šá-
4) ina muḫ-ḫi "IR-i-a A-šú šá
5) "ŠEŠ-šú-nu "mu-kin-ni
6) "MU-a A-šú šá
7) "AD-ú-ki-i-ni

¹ Wunsch 2002.
² Cohen 1993, 298, on this page see the cases of the syllabic writing of the PN like A-da-ri-[um] and A-da-ri-ti, cf. CAD AI, 110.
³ Sandowicz (to be published).
⁴ This text is published by the kind permission of the Trustees of The British Museum.
Rev.  8) mdAG-SIPA-šú-nu A-šú šá
9) Ṋi-na-a šú ŠID
10) mMU-ŠEn-líl A mAp-la-a
11) NIBRUšú 1.KAM
12) šá ITI-šú-ra
13) MU.Š.KAM “Kam-bu-zi-á
14) LUGAL Ešú u KUR.ŠID

L. 8. The sign transliterated as SIPA looks more similar to ŠAB, however has no good sense.

[x] shekels of silver from an earlier (issue of) silver, property of Šumaya, son of Aplaya, is due by Ardiya, son of Aḫušunu.
Scribe : Iddin-Enlil, son of Aplaya. Nippur, 1st day of the month addaru, 5th year of Cambyses, king of Babylon and Lands.

Bibliography:

Radoslaw TARASEWICZ <radekta@gmail.com>
University of Poznań